

Shelter building with Tarps

There are a number of reasons for setting up shelters when you arrive at a forest or campsite. Firstly, often you arrive with a variety of kit and individuals will have their own personal belongings, these items need protecting from the elements. You will also need to keep yourself dry and protected, if built correctly your shelter could also protect your fire area, allowing you to keep warm as well as dry

An essential piece of kit is your tarpaulin. This can come in a variety of different form, either one purchased specifically for the job, a groundsheet or any sheet of plastic of a decent size and thickness. Below you will see some examples of how your tarp can be set up.

There are lots of different styles and designs that can be made from any tarp. Try not to make it too complicated as you may need to put up your shelter in a hurry .Below is just a few ideas. Happy Building!!!
